WHO'S WHO IN THE EAST

Volume II

(The first under Marquis Editorship)

A HALF-CENTURY OF EXPERIENCE: Over fifty years of useful and successful publication of biographical reference work implies many things. Primarily, however, it implies continuing and strict adherence to ethical standards set by this editorial doctrine: publication — and selection for inclusion — exclusively for reference usefulness.

THE NEED SERVED: A Marquis biographical compilation is published solely to serve a reference need and demand which has been thoroughly demonstrated.

WHY AND HOW THOSE LISTED ARE SELECTED: A biographee is sketched in a Marquis publication not because he wants to be — or because his friends or associates wish him to be — but because a selection routine based on fifty years' experience in serving the needs of serious reference consultants shows that actual or potential reference interest indicates he should be.

OTHER MARQUIS PUBLICATIONS: That doctrine — and that half century of experience — are both brought to WHO'S WHO IN THE EAST by its permanent addition to the Marquis group of biographical reference works, which includes the internationally-known "Who's Who in America," "Who's Who in Commerce and Industry" and "Who Was Who."

(See Continuation Overleaf)

THIS NEWEST ADDITION: And it was with that doctrine in mind — and that experience to guide them — that the editors undertook their evaluation of WHO'S WHO IN THE EAST when legal action resulted in it being at their disposal.

ITS PLACE: Their study demonstrated definite interest among community libraries, specialized reference centers, and other reference users, in a larger proportion of the outstanding men and women in the region involved than could be provided in a work of national coverage and usable size such as "Who's Who in America."

ITS PURPOSE: In fact, this investigation disclosed that for every 10 subject to reference interest to an extent justifying listing in "Who's Who," there are approximately 3 requisite for listing in order to serve sectionalized reference requirements with a reasonable degree of effectiveness.

THE REVISION: With this clearly defined reference need for — and the useful reference field of — logically delimited regional biographical reference works thus established, the editors addressed themselves specifically to applying to the compilation for WHO'S WHO IN THE EAST, as it stood on coming into their hands, the Marquis standards for selection for reference usefulness, standards which have brought to the phrase — Listed by Marquis — the world-wide repute it enjoys in reference centers, newspaper and business offices, and educational institutions.

THE RECOMPILATION: Those among the 20,000-odd biographees originally listed in WHO'S WHO IN THE EAST whom the editors considered subject to an appropriate degree of reference interest under the Marquis standards were retained in the compilation for the Marquis printing of it — the forthcoming Volume II..

THE RESULT: Into this revision of the original compilation there will be integrated new listings selected after careful analysis of the area involved under the usual Marquis compilative procedures tested over the last fifty years. The resulting new compilation will be the foundation selection to be carried forward hereafter through periodic revisions as the latest addition to the Marquis group of standard biographical reference works — the Marquis WHO'S WHO IN THE EAST.

NOTICE

WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA is thoroughly revised, brought down, and reissued biennially in bound form—the next such edition (Vol. 25) will be for the years 1948-49 and will be issued in 1948. Integral with this biennial bound definitive issuance, is THE MONTHLY SUPPLEMENT TO WHO'S WHO, which on the one hand provides the reference user with currency, and, on the other, enables him to avoid the expense of purchasing definitive volumes annually, and yet to have at hand many more listings than would otherwise be available to him. In addition, WHO WAS WHO, the companion volume to WHO'S WHO, makes conveniently available for handy reference use the last-published sketches of over 24,000 deceased WHO'S WHO biographees. These two volumes—WHO'S WHO and WHO WAS WHO—and THE MONTHLY SUPPLEMENT to the former, provide a biographical "library" which for scope and compactness combined is indeed unique.

WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA aims to give brief, crisp personal sketches of those whose position or achievements make them of general interest, and tells just the things every intelligent person wants to know about those who are most conspicuous in every reputable walk of life.

A valuable feature of the book will be found in the address appended to each sketch. Thus, the book possesses not only the best attributes of a Biographical Dictionary, but is also a handy Directory of those living people in whom almost everybody is interested.

This volume of WHO'S WHO—the first of two Anniversary Issuances—marks the semi-centennial of the A. N. Marquis Company, its publishers continuously since its inception; while the second—the succeeding (Volume 25) edition—will be the Fiftieth Anniversary printing of the publication.

AN IMPORTANT NOTICE*

This work, like all the standard Marquis biographical reference publications, is not merely an alphabetical arrangement of biographical data. And it is not a mere compilation of the names of those responding to mailings to lists obtainable from the mailing-list concerns and other sources. When there is no rigorous enforcement of a selective standard which assures inclusion of the listings necessary to coverage of basic reference requirements, no reference standing, completeness or worth can result.

Its compilation has been so patterned that this work will serve usefully and effectively in private or public libraries as a sound biographical reference tool. Biographees have been painstakingly searched out who fall under the unique measures of reference incidence carefully assembled at large expense by the A. N. Marquis Company to meet its standards for selection resulting from nearly a half century of specialized biographical reference experience.

Exploitation in any manner whatsoever of the names herein, thus selected and under which the biographical sketches appear alphabetically, is beyond the fair uses intended in the sale of the work, and in certain obvious circumstances, if damage follows to the publisher from a misappropriation of his time and expense expended in their selection, may bring legal action.

In respect to those selected for inclusion in the work, the great majority of whom have by making biographical data available cooperated in assuring the completeness vital to actual reference use, this notice is directed toward fending off on their behalf use of their names as canvassing and mailing lists; in respect to others, its purpose is obvious.

THE "*INQUIRED ABOUT" THREE-IN-TEN-THOUSAND

This twenty-fourth biennial volume of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA marks the Fiftieth Anniversary of The A. N. Marquis Company, continuously its publisher since its initiation. The next edition will commemorate the semi-centennial of WHO'S WHO itself.

Albert Nelson Marquis, founder of both the publishing house and the compilation which became its principal publication, was an established publisher on coming to Chicago from Ohio during the last decade of the nineteenth century. He advertised as a "general book publisher," solicited correspondence with authors, and assured "all manuscripts . . . prompt reading."

The nineteenth-century Marquis books range from one "treating on the use and abuse of the child's voice" to a "fortune seekers' guide to the Klondike." Their variety was sufficiently marked to include pioneer city directories and guides. One of the first Marquis compilations, copyrighted sixty-two years ago, was offered as "a complete history, reference book and guide to the city of Chicago," its preface calling "attention to the fact that it occupies a field not filled — nor even attempted—by any previous publication." A city directory published by Marquis three years later emphasized that in giving telephone numbers it had undertaken what "no other directory has attempted."

Early Marquis titles indicative of the wide variety characteristic of them before "Who's Who" disclosed the latent demand to which is accountable the company's succeeding specialization in biographical compilation.

Actually, authoritative works of considerable significance are more typical of Marquis' titles during the latter part of the last century than the four publications mentioned above and singled out largely on the score of unusualness. Indeed, one at least of the more typical publications might rank among monumental works—an English translation of the famous German "Life of Animals" by Dr. Alfred Edmund Brehm, comprehensively illustrated with drawings of exceptional quality which were in numerous instances effectively reproduced from color plates probably some of the first to be used in this country in "edition publishing."

Leading educators and librarians of the time welcomed the undertaking with pronounced enthusiasm, a comment typical of the many Marquis received declaring: "This work, of which we have in the Boston Public Library different editions in the original, is regarded as one of the highest authorities. . . . Your enterprise in thus placing it within reach of our English-reading public cannot be too highly commended."

This doubtless highly satisfying experience of successfully publishing a reference work of the unquestioned standing of Brehm's, and the resulting contacts with educators and librarians, may well have combined to turn Marquis' attention decisively to the field in which he specialized during the succeeding three decades. Whatever the specific explanation, the publishing business he established from the closing four years of the nineteenth century onwards concentrated almost exclusively on reference works, with biographical compilations as its specialism.

Marquis operated the enterprise as a sole proprietorship for thirty years, until two decades ago—in 1926 he disposed of it, but continued to serve as editor of WHO'S WHO, and retained a twenty percent participation, until completely retiring from all vocational activity several years before his death in 1943.

The Marquis company's specialization on the compilation of biographical reference works, for over forty of the fifty years now completed, began with the unusual interest attracted by the first printing of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA. A semi-biographical compilation—a "portfolio" of "stage celebrities" of the period of Joseph Jefferson, Henry Irving, Edwin Booth and Marie Tempest —apparently had not been sufficiently successful to warrant especial attention. WHO'S WHO, on the other hand, at once produced indications that quickly convinced Marquis it had been directed toward a hitherto unserved reference demand.

This was a demand for accurate, condensed biographical and career data concerning those actually noteworthy, nationally and meritoriously, among the living, compiled without the addition of comment or other editorial embellishment. A number of compilations had been offered to serve such a demand before WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA first issued, but all had failed, because their content had been adjusted to either the desires of those listed or the opinions of the compilers. WHO'S WHO succeeded because its content was rigidly restricted to the users' reference needs.

The specialization on which the Marquis company has consistently concentrated, once WHO'S WHO had "proved up" new reference requirements, is principally directed toward the compilative methodism of effectively searching out those actually, or most likely to be, subject to reference interest. The degree of specialization required by this task is of course far more intensive today than that necessary during the first three decades of this century when Marquis was evolving basic compilative procedures.

The beginning problem was essentially merely that of requesting data from any who had obviously become subject theretofore to general reference interest. The reference usefulness of a biennial compilation of the results of earnest and continuous application to this initial undertaking were so apparent that for several decades there was little or no necessity to perfect methodisms for anticipating reference interest or assuring that all subject to the selected determinative degree of reference interest would be listed.

Stated in other words, for several decades periodic publication of such biographical data as those considered suitable for listing were agreeable to supplying, provided a wanted reference facility which increased in effectiveness almost in direct proportion to the inevitable gradual increase in the number of biographees included. There was, in short, initially a large number of men and women subject to reference interest who had never been listed in a national biographical compilation, and so long as more of them made data available for each successive issuance, a useful and wanted service resulted. Whether all qualified for inclusion were listed in the compilation—even how many were qualified for listing in it—did not for some time, therefore, become evident as fundamentally decisive problems.

However, as the listings gradually expanded, assurance, first, that all subject to the degree of reference interest on which compilation was based were listed, and, second, that those not so qualified were not listed, became the determinative factor. It is in the evolvement of a compilative methodism for meeting this decisive requirement that the Marquis organization has specialized during the last two decades, and in which it will continue to specialize hereafter.

This specialization has resulted in a continuous compilative procedure which applies detailed selective standards, already tested in actual practice for a number of years, on the average to more names in thirty days than are finally selected for WHO'S WHO during twenty-four months. That is to say, it has become necessary, in order to select effectively the new listing for an edition of WHO'S WHO, carefully to evaluate, against detailed standards reflecting actual or potential reference subjectivity, the biographical data of over 50,000, each of whom has been initially carefully and individually chosen in the ratio of about four out of every ten thousand of the total population. Listings in WHO'S WHO are in a ratio of around three-in-ten-thousand—but assuring to the reference user, in so far as it is possible to do so, that the three are the three-in-ten-thousand regarding whom he is most likely to consult the compilation, is today a highly specialized task.

In order to restrict current compilations to data judged to be subject currently to reference interest, names are now deleted as a matter of routine procedure and others are carried in files keyed to published lists. All listings considered sufficiently subject to current reference interest are immediately printed in THE MONTHLY SUPPLEMENT, whether or not a decision as to inclusion in a final compilation has been made by the editors, in order that reference users may have them available expeditiously.

These compilative specialisms are utilized to assure, in so far as is possible, that once carefully set selective standards, based solely on reference interest, establish a biographee as appropriate for listing, all others, subject to exactly the same selective measurement, will also be considered for listing. Only such a procedure can provide the reference user maximum serviceability—and, incidentally, of itself should make clear why Marquis listings are solely decided by reference factors, and not at all by the desires of those involved to be or not to be listed.

The result of thorough application of this compilative methodism should be that those the reference user can logically expect to find listed will be listed—by and large and with the inevitable exceptions to prove the rule—and not merely some of them. This volume of WHO'S WHO offers its consultants tangible benefits directly creditable to this procedure for not only avoiding unjustified listings, but as well for reducing failures to list when reference usefulness justifies inclusion—it lists 8,919 never before included in the compilation (1,442 have been dropped because of death or other reasons, leaving a net 40,145 for the volume).

So long as such compilative betterments as they may be able to offer reference users of WHO'S WHO bring them encouragement of which this from James M. Cain (sketched on page 352) is typical, the editors will consider themselves generously rewarded indeed: ". . . I think WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA is one of the most valuable books published, and I use it ten times more than any book except possibly the big Webster Dictionary* . . ."

THE EDITORS.

* The Merriam Webster, on page 2921 of which, incidentally, this definition is to be found: ". . . a person whose status, antecedents, etc., may be inquired about; hence a person of prominence as, one of the whos in Who's Who."

WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA ADMISSION STANDARDS

Except for names which are included in WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA for one or more of the arbitrary reasons designated below, the aim is to include the names, not necessarily of the best, but rather of the best known, men and women in all lines of useful and reputable achievement—names much in the public eye, not locally, but generally. The standards of admission divide the eligible into two classes: (1) those selected on account of special prominence in creditable lines of effort, making them the subjects of extensive interest, inquiry or discussion; and (2) those included arbitrarily on account of official position—civil, military, naval, religious, or educational.

CLASS ONE

The first of these two classes comprises persons who have accomplished some conspicuous achievement—something out of the ordinary, so to speak—something which distinguishes them from the vast majority of their contemporaries. This class is confined to those so identified with American affairs as to be subject to wide inquiry or discussion. Since selection is entirely guided by reference interest thus delimited, individual details of residence and the like are not determinative; while, additionally, in the compilative routine "American" does not apply only to those technically Americans because of allegiance to one of the twenty-one Republics of America, but as well to citizens of Canada and the other associated or contiguous Pan American areas. Names frequently appear of those who are broadly prominent in some special field, but who are little known in their own communities. The man of great achievement may be scarcely known in the particular locality in which he lives. He is often a person whose work is better known than himself, and it is pertinent information concerning such an individual that WHO'S WHO aims to gather and disseminate.

ARBITRARY CLASS

The arbitrary class embraces without regard to notability or prominence in any other respect, the following from, or located in, the United States of America: All members of the Congress; members of the Cabinet; Federal judges; governors of States, Territories and island possessions; Federal department heads; judges of State and Territorial Courts of the highest appellate jurisdiction; ambassadors and ministers plenipotentiary, and ambassadors and ministers accredited to the country; consuls general or consuls at important posts abroad; living authors of books possessing more than ephemeral interest or value—books which have received a considerable degree of recognition by the general public or which have attained wide usage by special groups or classes, such as educational groups, scientific groups, literary groups, and the like; the attorneys general of the various States; officers of the Army above the rank of colonel, and of the Navy above the rank of captain; heads of the larger universities and colleges; heads of the leading societies devoted to philanthropic, educational and scientific aims; members of the National Academy of Sciences, the National Academy of Design, the American Academy of Arts and Letters, the National Institute of Arts and Letters; bishops and chief ecclesiastics of all the larger religious denominations; and others who are chosen in like manner because of their official relations and affiliations. To be sure, the majority in these arbitrary classifications would, because of unofficial achievement, be admitted without hesitation irrespective of official position.

AND ALSO "STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN"

Merely a cursory reading of the preface to this volume—pages five and six—will establish ample justification for the important admonitory notice opposite page five. In addition, certain cease and desist orders handed down by The Federal Trade Commission—on guard in the interest of the consumer and as well the fairly-competing enterprise—in effect make most appropriate adding "stop, look, and listen" to that warning. The most recent of these, the Commission's Order Number 5108, is in part officially summarized as follows:

"An order prohibiting use of the term 'Who's Who' [illegible] title of any of their biographical reference books [illegible]ed by the Federal Trade Commission against [illegible] [illegible]cations are those en[illegible] titled Who's Who in the Western Hemisphere, Who's Who in the Clergy, Who's Who in Law, and Who's Who Among Physicians and Surgeons. The Commission finds that, through use of the term 'Who's Who' in the titles the respondents represented falsely that the books were compiled and published by the A. N. Marquis Co., Chicago, publisher of the well-known Who's Who in America; that the respondents are connected with such publisher and that their books have been edited and compiled with the same accuracy, reliability and selectivity as that used in WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA.

"In addition to being required to discontinue use of the term 'Who's Who' in titles for their books, the respondents are ordered to cease and desist from representing that they are associated with the publishers of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA or that their publications are edited or compiled with the same accuracy, reliability and selectivity as that used by the publishers of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA . . ."

ALPHABETIZATION PRACTICES

Names are arranged alphabetically according to the surnames, and under identical surnames according to the first given name. If both surname and first given name are identical, names are arranged alphabetically according to the second given name. Where full names are identical, they are arranged in order of age—those of the elder being put first.

Surnames beginning with De, Des, Du, etc., however capitalized or spaced, are recorded with the prefix preceding the surname and arranged alphabetically under the letter D.

Surnames beginning with Mac are arranged alphabetically under M. This likewise holds for names beginning with Mc; that is, all names beginning Mc will be found in alphabetical order after those beginning Mac.

Surnames beginning with St. (Saint) are all arranged before names beginning Sta and are themselves arranged according to the second part of the surname (St. Clair before St. Dennis). Names prefixed with Saint (spelled out) are arranged in regular alphabetical order.

Surnames beginning with prefix Van are arranged alphabetically under letter V.

Surnames containing the prefix Von or von are usually arranged alphabetically under letter V; any exceptions are noted by cross references (Von Kleinsmid, Rufus Bernhard; see Kleinsmid, Rufus Bernhard von).

The five specific practices last above mentioned, which differ from the procedures followed by many reference centers and publishing organizations, have been adapted in the belief that every day use of a biographical compilation is as a result facilitated.

Compound hyphenated surnames are arranged according to the first member of the compound.

Compound unhyphenated surnames common in Spanish are not separated and are treated as hyphenated names.

Since Chinese names have the family name first, they are so arranged, but without comma between family name and given name (as Lin Yutang).

Parentheses used in connection with a name indicate which part of the full name is usually deleted in common usage. Hence Abbott, W(illiam) Lewis indicates that the usual form of the given names is W. Lewis. In alphabetizing this type the parentheses are not considered. However if the name is recorded Abbott, (William) Lewis, signifying that the entire name William is not commonly used, the alphabetizing would be arranged as though the name were Abbott, Lewis.

LATEST LISTINGS AND DATA—DEATHS DURING PRINTING: ADDENDUM

The latest listings for each edition necessarily appear initially in this Addendum whenever the appropriate pages in the body of the compilation have been plated for the presses. Changes of importance in connection with the sketches appearing in the volume are also noted below, following the names of the biographees involved, when coming to the attention of the editors too late for insertion in sketches. Because an edition of a book of the size of WHO'S WHO must necessarily be printed in a number of sections (forms) —and all these sections completed before binding can begin —provision can not otherwise be made for such data.

Biographees considered to be sufficiently subject to general reference interest to justify listing before data is either received from them or assembled by the editors independently, are (1) included—by at least titles, names and addresses—in either the body of the compilation or the Addendum, or (2) noted in the Addendum by names only (grouped alphabetically after the last name under each letter of the alphabet) following daggers (†) to indicate that "Who's Who in Commerce and Industry," or double daggers (‡) that "The Monthly Supplement," should be consulted for any data that may be published before a succeeding volume of WHO'S WHO itself issues. Moreover, all such biographees are immediately listed in the geographical index of the volume of WHO'S WHO first issuing following their selection.

Deaths reported after the pages involved have been made up for the press are also listed below, and no other record thereof is contained in this volume. The sketches of other biographees known to have died during compilation carry suitable notations. The sketches of all biographees selected for initial inclusion in a volume, including the sketches of those among these biographees known to be no longer living when it issues, are published in it, and as well those of other biographees known to be deceased if revisions before death, or other factors considered by the editors to be of reference importance, are involved. The purpose of this practice is, primarily, to place in reference service the latest data received by the editors from every selected biographee, and, secondarily, to make them available to those closely interested as part of the published compilation in which those deceased had been chosen for inclusion. The last-published sketches of deceased biographees invariably appear (after being submitted for final verification) in the next edition of "Who Was Who" published; and, in instances judged by the editors to involve appropriate reference factors, currently in "The Monthly Supplement."
